How to invite someone to see your DNA results on Ancestry

Sign into your account on Ancestry – then hover over the DNA and choose Your DNA Results Summary

Scroll down to the Sharing DNA results and choose the INVITE OTHERS TO ACCESS DNA RESULTSSharing DNA results

These people have been invited to view the results of the DNA Test. To change the role assigned to each person, click the Edit button. You can also take away a person's permission to view the test by clicking the "Remove" link.

Invited Person Role 🚺 Tasks

EDIT ROLES INVITE OTHERS TO ACCESS DNA RESULTS

Enter an email address and choose if you want them to be a Guest or Editor – Send Invitation Invite others to access DNA results

You can share DNA results with friends, relatives, or others who might be researching your family tree. You'll assign each person a role to determine how much access they have to the DNA test. You can choose who is invited to see the test and change their roles on the Test Settings page anytime.

| Email or Ancestry username         | What role should this person have? |
|------------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| Enter an email address or username | Guest OEditor 🗸                    |
| ADD PERSON SEE PREVIEW             |                                    |
| SEND INVITATION Cancel             |                                    |

A guest can simply look at the list – this will be what most invitations will be listed as An editor can attach your test to their tree, or enter notes You may change the roles at any time.